Pardo Endurance 60

MBY  December 19, 2023  motor yacht, New Boats

Pardo Endurance 60, which was introduced at the 2021 Cannes fair but was first exhibited at the Southampton fair, adds four-season features to the brand's Mediterranean style all-round deck daily boat formula.

It is certainly a very handsome boat at 59ft with its inverted bow post and bow windshield, and it is also very safe with its fully enclosed wheelhouse and all-round deck protected by parapets high enough to eliminate the need for railings.

The Pardo Endurance 60 also adds the upper deck, which is not available on the brand's rudder-married GT series. Accessed from the port side of the cockpit, the compact low-lying Flybridge is designed to keep the center of gravity as low as possible while offering extra space and flexibility.

The boat can also be optioned with a second helm station if desired, and there is an unusual deck section forward of the windbreak for sitting with a view or carrying a few bikes or SUPs.

A pair of folding parapets at the cockpit create approximately 17m² (180ft²) of cockpit space with access to the water. The hydraulic vertical swimming platform is large enough for a full-size jet boat and includes a rear-opening awning over the wheelhouse. The wheelhouse provides the full protection needed, but the guillotine windows on both sides of the galley make the stern of the boat as party-friendly as Pardo's more classic open boats when you want to open the boat.

Master Cabin

If you prefer long cruises, Pardo Endurance 60's three cabins, three bathrooms and optional two-person crew cabin are among the news you will like. Just like the upcoming E72 model of the Endurance series, the E60 puts operating efficiency at the center of the package. With a pair of IPS 700s or 800s, it's clear he's aiming for quiet, comfortable cruising rather than thoroughbred speed.
